Takuya : I was walking in front of the city hall, and a woman came up to me and asked me how to get to the station. She said she was going to meet her friend there. She didn't know the way, so she was very worried.

Ms. Ray : What did you do?

Takuya : At first, I couldn't say anything. But I remembered the English you taught us, so I tried my best to help her.

Ms. Ray : That was a nice thing to do. What did you tell her?

Takuya : I said, "Go straight and turn right at the third corner. After that you'll find the station on your left. It's about 10 minutes from here."

Ms. Ray : That's very good English. Did she understand?

Takuya : Yes, she did! I was really glad that she understood my English, so I want to help more people in English if I can.

Ms. Ray : Good job, Takuya! Speaking a foreign language isn't easy, but you can do anything if you try.

Takuya : Thanks, Ms. Ray.

Listen to the speech of a high school student, Lisa, and choose the best answer for questions 1, 2 and 3.

Let's start.

Hi, I'm Lisa. I came to Japan from America last month. I've been interested in Japanese anime, origami and music since I was in elementary school. I really love living here in Japan.

At first, I was really surprised to find that Japanese high schools are very different from American high schools. For example, in Japan, students go to school by bike, bus or train, but in America, many students go to school by bus. A lot of American students start to drive a car when they are 16, so they go to school by car, but high school students in Japan don't. But I was surprised at the clubs the most. In America, students can try many different sports. American students can try a new sport every season. I played volleyball in the fall, basketball in the winter and softball in the spring at my high school. But, I was surprised to learn that students in Japan stay in the same club for about three years! They practice hard and make a lot of friends.

American and Japanese high schools are different in many interesting ways, so I want to tell my friends when I go back to America.

Question 1 : What was Lisa surprised at the most?

Question 2 : Which sport did Lisa play at her American high school in the fall?

Question 3 : What did Lisa say in her speech?

(スピーチと質問を繰り返します。)
